

A letter to help forward an investigation

Dear member of parliament,

I'm writing to you on behalf of Suomen joukkovainotut ry. The association is advocating for Finnish people who have ended up as victims of gang stalking and who are part of the international group of ca. 50000 people who call themselves targeted individuals (TI). Gang stalking differs from common stalking in that the victim is stalked by an organized group of people which can often be remarkably large.

Suomen joukkovainotut ry, as well as the wider international and partly organized group of victims, are convinced that many of them are also victims of new kinds of human experiments, i.e., different types of remotely carried out electronic harassment. The harassment may be of the kind that US Cuban embassy employees were allegedly subjected to, or inducing hearing sensations with microwaves or radio frequencies.

Electronic harassment can also be proven with measurements, perhaps the best example of that being a test performed in Japan by victims themselves which was done with a spectrum analyzer. Below we have first the graph of the test result for a normal control subject, and then for a victim of the kind of human experiments described above. The measurements were performed in a shielded room, and we can see many "spikes" in the graph for the victim which show that they are "emitting" radio waves.

As I state in my diary, in Finland a person who believes they're a victim of electronic harassment and goes to the police and asks that the case is investigated, is routinely referred to mental health officials and subsequently involuntarily committed to a mental institution. They won't thus be granted an appropriate investigation, which would include a measurement and the search of possible implants, but instead they're declared mentally ill. There are numerous cases like this among us.

Within TI groups elsewhere in the world there have been many measurements and other investigations where they have, for example, found various kinds of implants that are possibly utilized in electronic harassment. Despite that there are no tests done by a research institute or the police that I know of, where they would've tried to duplicate the positive results of victims or searched for implants. The only studies that some universities have conducted are mere queries that have the unscientific presupposition that the victims are mentally ill.

Comparable cases in Finnish history can be found in the 1930s when the police refused to investigate properly the cases of people who ended up as victims of various kinds of persecution by the Lapua Movement. In addition to the police, Finnish parliament and the judicial system – also the attitude of the press and other media towards the victims were then similar as it is now towards victims of gang stalking.

In recent European history, Project Gladio of NATO – of which connections to Finland remain unclear – carried out somewhat similar operations. In East Germany, the Stasi had a program called Zersetzung in which the aim was to destroy the target psychologically and which included many similar methods as what the TI's in Finland and around the world have reported.

My wish is that you members of parliament will scrutinize the actions of the police and mental health officials regarding this subject, and help forward an appropriate investigation for possible victims of human experiments that our association represents, which would include the search of implants and a spectrum analysis test of which possible positive results would lead to criminal investigations. It could be done as a group test where the costs per capita would be reasonably low. Important relevant links:
